Jesus, the Son of God

On Palm Sunday, churches may hear a lengthy reading of the Gospel, telling of the events of Jesus' last week with his disciples before his crucifixion. As he was being tortured and killed, there were those who mocked the notion that people were calling him Messiah or Son of God. In his suffering, they wanted to see if he would be rescued from the cross.

After he took his last breath, a centurian standing by declared, "Surely, this man was the Son of God." A man who was likely a Roman, having nothing invested in the Jewish faith. Who had nothing to gain by his words.

Yet his words bookend Mark the Evangelist's first words: "The beginning of the good news of Jesus Christ, the Son of God." It's as if the centurian's words wrap up the point Mark declared from the start. Here is the Son of God. Here's what I know. Here's how he taught, healed and loved. You decide." And the centurian has decided. Will we? Who is Jesus to you?
